health insurance policies, understand their credit report and how it affects their ability to get credit and on what terms, and simply decide how to pay for a purchase;

Whereas National Consumer Protection Week annually highlights consumer protection and education efforts across the country;

Whereas the theme of National Consumer Protection Week 2009 is “Nuts and Bolts: Tools for Today’s Economy”, which highlights consumer education efforts across the Nation that are particularly vital during the current global financial crisis;

Whereas more than 100 Federal agencies have collaborated on a website, www.consumer.gov, which provides helpful information ranging from how credit reports work to how to buy a new home and provides consumers with the tools they need to protect themselves and make smart choices in today’s market;

Whereas the Federal Trade Commission collects consumer complaints about identity theft, fraud, debt collection, and other consumer issues, and in 2008 collected over 1.2 million consumer complaints, more than half of which were fraud complaints that resulted in consumers losing over $1.8 billion;

Whereas the Federal Trade Commission and other agencies collaborate with the Financial and Economic Literacy Caucus of the House of Representatives on various consumer events, including the annual National Consumer Protection Week Fair;

Whereas National Consumer Protection Week partner organizations have tips on a wide range of topics, from how to get a free credit report, spot a telemarketing scam, avoid home and auto repair scams, to how to file a consumer complaint with the appropriate authorities; and

Whereas public, community-based, and private sector organizations throughout the United States are working to increase financial literacy rates and consumer protection for people of all ages and walks of life through a range of outreach efforts, including media campaigns, websites, and one-on-one financial counseling: Now, therefore, be it
